

What is claimed is

1. A memory card structure comprising a circuit board and a case, wherein, the size of the case is a little smaller than that of the circuit board; a space being formed between the case and the circuit; a contact terminal is disposed on one end of the circuit board with exposure which is not covered by the case thereby accomplishing chipping structure of the memory card.
2. The Memory Card structure as recited in claim 1, wherein, both sides of the circuit board being disposed with a contact terminal.